

How did she KNOW that!

This month our psychic roadshow rolled into Rayleigh in Essex to test the powers of local medium Patricia Putt. We picked six people at random and asked her to read for them on the spot. So how well did she do? Read the results and find out!

PATRICIA PUTT
Patricia describes herself as a human telephone exchange. 'I'm like God's middleman,' she says, 'connecting people on earth to their friends and relatives on the other side.' A Roman Catholic and spiritualist, Patricia was born in northern India, where she had her first psychic experience at the age of four. 'I correctly predicted a flood,' she says, 'much to the extreme surprise of my family.'

WIN a one-to-one reading with Patricia Putt

Solve our Arrow word clues and write down the letters in the starred squares to reveal a hidden word. Write this word on a postcard and send it, with your name, address and daytime phone number, to Fate & Fortune Arrow word August, PO Box 167, Accrington BB5 4WD, or call 0901-383 4188, or fax 0901-383 3318, by 16 August 2004. Calls cost 25p from BT landlines. The sender of the first correct answer drawn wins the reading.

MOYA STRUTT, 59, classroom assistant

PATRICIA SAYS 'Your dad's spirit is here and he says he's so glad he can speak with you at last. He's been trying to get you to see a medium for some time. He describes you as his princess who was born in a castle. He has always been so proud of you and tells me he chose you a special name. He says you hurt your right foot and it's making you depressed. But be patient, it will heal.'

MOYA SAYS 'I've been meaning to see a medium for years. I thought it was just a coincidence that I met Patricia today, but now I think it was fate. I'm completely gobsmacked by what she has said. I was born in a castle in Derbyshire where my mother and other pregnant women had been evacuated during the war. They contacted my dad's naval ship to tell him I'd been born and he asked that I be named after an Irish nurse on board called Moya. I hurt my foot last year and although it looks normal it hurts if I walk too far. I'm delighted that it will get better and even more delighted that I had the reading.'

RICHARD O'CONNOR, 25, student

PATRICIA SAYS 'I'm being told that you are a very kind person who will do anything for anyone, but that you're too afraid to give blood. Please try to get over this fear as your blood group, AB rhesus negative, is very rare. I'm being told this by your grandad, who says he was football-mad. He played for an East End team and supported West Ham. He knows you feel a wally when you talk to him, but he wants you to know he's listening.'

RICHARD SAYS 'That was mind-blowing! Not only did she get my personality right but she also knew my blood group! My dad and sister give blood regularly, but I can't stand needles. After my reading, though, I'll try to pluck up the courage to become a donor for real. My grandad, an East Ender, was a very keen footballer. He played for a local side and supported West Ham as a boy. I admit I do talk to him from time to time, although I feel silly. I shall do it more often now I know he's listening.'

CAROLE KIRSH, 36, bank clerk

PATRICIA SAYS 'I'm being told by your grandad that you have the daftest sense of humour. If someone had left the price label on their shoe you would find it hysterical. He used to love it when you went to visit and tells me he always had a plate of biscuits ready for you. He says you're a real people person and a softie just like him. In fact, people often see you as a shoulder to cry on, but don't get too involved or you'll end up feeling drained.'

CAROLE SAYS 'I was nervous about the reading. But what Patricia said, although not mind-blowing, was 100 per cent accurate. If I saw a label on someone's shoe I would find it side-splittingly funny. My grandad did always have a plate of biscuits ready when I went round to visit, and personality-wise I am just like Grandad — a softie. It's true that people often use me as their rock. I don't mind usually but if I think about it a lot, it does leave me feeling quite tired.'

VAL MITCHELL, 60, accounts clerk

PATRICIA SAYS 'Your dad is telling me that his last weeks on earth were harrowing for you and that you still get flashbacks of that time. He knows he meant the world to you and says he loves you, too. He tells me you're not yourself at the moment. And because you seem so down he has been giving you lots of hugs. So if you've been feeling a bit warm from time to time, don't worry, it's not a hot flush, it's his spirit presence making contact. He's also talking about a birthday party he enjoyed. He says it was the last time you were all together and that it's his fondest memory.'

VAL SAYS 'I loved my dad to pieces and memories of his last days are still painful. I have been having hot flushes lately and I shouldn't be having them any more. It makes sense that it's Dad because I feel pretty fit and healthy otherwise. Life has been tough lately so it's good to know he's there for me. The birthday party was my daughter Angela's. It was the last family gathering before Dad passed on.'

DIANE HARDING, 54, housewife

PATRICIA SAYS 'Your dad says he wants to say hello to his girls and his son. He said he knows he's not forgotten, but wants you to know he's still around you all. Your mum is also looking out for you. She says you have taken her place in the family and you often ask yourself, "What would Mum do in this situation?" Well, she will tune into you psychically and send you messages of advice. So if an idea suddenly comes into your head, act on it, because it's from your mum.'

DIANE SAYS 'I have two sisters and a brother. We all still talk about our dad so he certainly isn't forgotten. It's nice to have a hello back from him. I guess I have taken Mum's place in the family — keeping everyone in touch with each other and looking out for my siblings. And I do often wonder out loud, "What would Mum do now?" I look forward to getting her answer. I'm glad I had the reading. I'll recommend Patricia to all my friends.'

SARAH MANSFIELD, 28, accounts assistant

PATRICIA SAYS 'I'm being told you're a shopaholic. Your grandad's in spirit and he's laughing as he tells me that you can't resist a shop. But you do it because you're bored and want more from life. In fact, you've been thinking about travelling to the Far East and Hong Kong. Grandad says it would do you good, but says don't be too impatient. He advises you to wait 18 months. He says you'll be better off financially then, and also the world will be a quieter place.'

SARAH SAYS 'I'm completely stunned by Patricia's reading. She really couldn't have been more accurate. My husband, Glenn, has to rein me in with the shopping or I just get totally carried away. We both want more excitement in our lives so we are planning a trip to the Far East, with Hong Kong as our first stop. It can't happen soon enough for me as I'm feeling bored at the moment. But I think Grandad is right: we need to sort the cash flow out first. I'm going to cancel my credit cards and steer clear of the shops.'
